CROSSFIT OTL

YOUR GUIDE TO GETTING STARTED

WELCOME

We are CrossFit OTL — On The Line Fitness.

Everything you need for your first ninety days: how class works, who's coaching you, and what's actually coming.

NORTH RICHLAND HILLS, TEXAS · 9155 Blvd 26, Suite 270 · crossfit-otl.com

FROM THE JAIME FAMILY

You're in.

Walking through the door was the hard part. Most people who think about doing this never do it — they talk themselves out of it, or someone talks them out of it for them. You didn't. That already separates you.

We started this in a garage. Four or five women training in a driveway, a set of barbells, some rubber floor, and a pull-up rig. Then the homeschool boys came at 9am. Then the kids at 4pm. In February 2022 we opened the doors on Blvd 26, and thirty of those garage people came with us.

We are a family business in the plainest sense of the phrase. Isabel and her husband Clay coach here. Nicholas and his wife Ava coach here. Deanie's twin sister Lamar coaches here. We built this gym around our own kids' futures, and we run it the way we'd want a gym run for our own family — because it is one.

Here's what we ask of you: show up, ask questions, and tell your coach the truth — about your history, your injuries, your sleep, what you ate. We can work with anything you tell us. We can't work with what you hide.

Here's what we owe you in return: a coach who knows your name and your goal before you walk in, programming that scales to exactly where you are today, and an honest answer every time you ask for one.

WE ARE CROSSFIT OTL

On The Line Fitness

So what's on the line?

Your health. Your freedom. Your energy. The years you get.
Whether your kids grow up watching this or not. Your family.

Everything.

Let's get to work,

The Jaime Family

Javier & Deanie · Isabel & Clay · Nicholas & Ava

This was built around life change.

Because that is exactly what CrossFit did for the Jaime family first — and then for everyone who walked in after them.

Javier found CrossFit in 2012 and it changed him. Then it changed Deanie. Then Isabel and Nicholas. Then the handful of neighbors training in their garage. This gym exists because that ripple kept going — and you are the next person in it.

What did the changing is ordinary and repeatable: movements you already use — squatting, picking things up, pressing overhead, carrying, running — done well, done at an intensity that's right for you, and repeated until your body adapts.

Every workout we program scales. The 62-year-old grandmother and the former college athlete do the same workout on the same day with different loads, different reps, and different movements. Same stimulus. Same hour. Same room.

What you can expect from us

- Coaching, not supervision. Every class is led by a credentialed coach who watches your reps and corrects them. All eleven of our coaches hold a CrossFit Level 1 or higher — seven at Level 2 or above, including a Certified CrossFit Trainer (CF-L3).
- Programming with a reason behind it. We run CrossFit Affiliate Programming with clear Beginner, Intermediate, and RX tracks built into every session. You'll always know which one is yours.
- The whole picture. Training is one input. Nutrition, sleep, and consistency are the others. We coach all of it, because three out of four doesn't work.
- Objective progress. InBody scans, benchmark workouts, and lifting numbers. Not vibes.
- A room where your family belongs. Kids and teens train while adults train — same building, same hour, year-round.

What we won't do

We won't promise you quick results, because there aren't any worth having. We won't compete with a big-box gym on price — different product. And we won't tell you this is easy. It isn't. That's the entire point.

So what is CrossFit?

CrossFit's own definition is one line: constantly varied functional movements performed at high intensity. Every word in it is doing work.

Constantly varied

The workout changes every day on purpose. Your body adapts to what it can predict — so we don't let it predict. Broad, general readiness beats a narrow specialty.

Functional movements

Movements that move large loads long distances, quickly — and that mirror what real life asks of you: stand up, pick it up, put it overhead, carry it, go.

High intensity

Intensity is relative to you, and it's where results come from. Your intensity on day one and on day four hundred are different numbers doing the same job.

The goal is work capacity across broad time and modal domains — being good across short and long efforts, across lifting and gymnastics and cardio, rather than excellent at one thing and helpless at the rest. That's a deliberate bet that life doesn't tell you in advance what it's going to demand.

Go learn it yourself — don't just ask us

We will answer any question you have, any time. But the members who understand why we program the way we do stop needing to ask — and they train better for it. All of this is public and most of it is free.

The CrossFit Level 1 Training Guide

The actual textbook, free to download at crossfit.com. Mechanics, the nine foundational movements, nutrition, programming, and scaling. Almost no members read it. The ones who do change how they train.

The CrossFit Journal

The archive of foundational articles — including "What Is Fitness?" (2002), which lays out the ten general physical skills, the three metabolic pathways, and the sickness-to-fitness continuum this gym is built on.

crossfit.com and the CrossFit YouTube channel

Daily programming, movement standards, and demo videos for every lift and gymnastics skill we run. Good place to review a movement the night before.

Take the Level 1 course yourself

You do not have to want to coach. Some of our strongest members took the L1 purely to understand the why. Talk to Javier or any of the staff — every one of us has been through it, and we will tell you honestly whether it's worth your weekend.

YOUR COACHES

Who's on the floor.

Every one of us is credentialed by CrossFit, and most of us are related — this gym was founded by a family and is still coached by one. Isabel and Nicholas started CrossFit as kids, so they know this methodology as well as coaches twelve years in. Ask any of us anything.

THE FAMILY

Javier Jaime

FOUNDER / COACH

Coached at a YMCA at 25, found CrossFit in 2012, ran the garage gym for six years before CrossFit OTL opened. Earned his Level 3 in July 2026.

CF-L3

Deanie Jaime

CO-FOUNDER / GM / NUTRITION COACH

A former VP of Human Resources in healthcare before this. If something about your membership needs sorting out, she is who to see.

CF-L2 · NUTRITION

Isabel Butler

CO-FOUNDER / COACH

Started CrossFit as a kid herself. Assistant-coached CrossFit Kids from age 14 and earned her L1 at 17.

CF-L2 · L3 CANDIDATE

Clay Butler

COACH

Married to Isabel. Also credentialed in Olympic weightlifting and the ATG "knees over toes" system.

CF-L2 · USAW-L1 · ATG

Nicholas Jaime

CO-FOUNDER / COACH

Started CrossFit as a kid and earned his L1 at 17. Coaches mechanics and positions closely — if something is not clicking for you, go find him.

CF-L2

Ava Jaime

COACH

Married to Nicholas. Coaches adult and youth classes, and is working toward her Level 2.

CF-L1

Lamar DeOreo

COACH / NUTRITION COACH

Deanie's twin sister and one of the original garage-gym crew — in this since the driveway boot-camp days.

CF-L2 · NUTRITION

COACHING STAFF

Christi Chaka

COACH

A member first, then an intern, and coaching four years since. Teaches full-time and runs our 5AM.

CF-L2

Maci Osborn

COACH

Came up through our youth program, then interned. Now coaches teens and adults.

CF-L1 · CF KIDS

Kasey Price

KIDS COACH

A member for three years with her family before she started coaching.

CF-L1

Nichole Ward

COACH

A full-time teacher who coaches adult and youth classes as she can.

CF-L1

How a class runs.

Sixty minutes, five parts, every time. Arrive ten minutes early for your first few.

1 Briefing

Your coach walks the class through the day: the workout, what it's supposed to feel like, the target, and how each track scales. If you don't know which track is yours, ask here.

2 General Warm-Up

Coach-led, not specific to the day yet. Heart rate up, temperature up, joints moving through full range.

3 Specific Warm-Up

Now we rehearse the day's exact movements at light load. This is where your coach sets your weight and your scaling, and where technique gets corrected — before it matters.

4 The Workout of the Day

Some days that's conditioning, some days it's a Heavy Day. Your coach is moving the whole time — correcting positions, adjusting loads, holding people to the intended pace.

5 Cool-Down & Recovery

Intentional cool-down stretching and recovery — part of the session, not an optional add-on. Your coach also uses this time for announcements and a preview of tomorrow's workout.

Heavy Days

Some days the strength work is the workout, with no conditioning piece after it. That's deliberate. Cramming a lift in before a metcon every day means you never really train strength — you train a rushed version of it with one eye on the clock. Heavy Days give you room to build real strength and power.

Three things new members always ask

"What if I'm last?"

Someone is. Nobody cares, and the class stays with you — nothing gets put away until everyone finishes and the coach says so.

"What if I can't do the movement?"

Then you do the version you can do. That's what scaling is. Your coach will hand it to you before you have to ask.

"Do I need to be fit first?"

No. That's like showering before the shower. Come as you are — we start where you are.

Your first ninety days.

Most gyms won't tell you this. People quit CrossFit at predictable moments, for predictable reasons. None of it is a sign that it isn't working. We're telling you now so that when it happens, you recognize it instead of believing it.

WK 1

SORENESS

You will be sore in places you didn't know existed.

Not because CrossFit is uniquely brutal, but because in a coached class you work harder than you ever would alone, using muscles you haven't used in years. This is the single most common week to quit. It passes. Come back sore — moving helps.

WK 4

EGO

Someone you didn't expect will out-lift you.

A grandmother. A stay-at-home mom. Someone half your size. It stings, and it's the most reliable proof that this room is doing something. They started before you did. That's the whole difference.

WK 4

IMPATIENCE

Thirty days won't show you what you came for.

This is a long-adaptation program. The scale is a lagging indicator and a bad one. Track your lifts, your reps, and your InBody instead — those move first, and they move honestly.

MO 3

THE FADE

The urgency that got you here wears off.

Ten classes the first month, five the second, none the third — and you never actually decided to quit. This is how it ends for most people. The fix is a standing appointment: pick your days now, put them on the calendar, and treat them like work.

Make it past three months and the odds flip hard in your favor. Six months becomes likely. A year becomes probable. Three months is the gate — everything we do in your first ninety days is aimed at getting you through it.

The Committed Club

Attend fifteen or more classes in a month and the app puts you in that month's Committed Club. You get that month's sticker. Keep stacking them and gear comes at the milestones — twelve months, twenty-four months, and beyond. Sit with what that actually means: fifteen classes a month, every month, for a year. Then two.

We track it because it is the single best predictor we have of two things: who is rooted in this community and isn't going anywhere, and who is going to set personal records and measurably improve their fitness and health. It isn't a guarantee — nothing here is. It's the strongest signal we've found, and the people in the club month after month are the ones whose lives visibly change.

The other thing that happens: if you're open to it, you'll make real friends here. Some of ours got married — Isabel and Clay met on this floor. Others just ended up standing in each other's weddings.

When we train.

Reserve your spot in the member app. Classes fill — book ahead, and cancel if plans change so someone else can take the slot.

CrossFit Teens	Monday, Tuesday & Thursday	5:00 PM

Youth classes run alongside the adult class in the same hour, on the other side of the floor — see Kids & Teens for why.

Booking & cancellation

Reserve through the member app. Your photo is on file, so every coach knows who you are before you walk in — that's deliberate.

If your plans change, cancel your reservation in the app so the spot opens back up.

Common courtesy

Classes start and finish on time because the next class is waiting. That's not a rule we enforce — it's just how we treat the people coming in behind us. Be on the floor and ready at the top of the hour.

Late arrivals miss the warm-up. If you're late, find the coach before you jump in.

What's available to you.

Group class is the backbone. Everything else exists to get you into it well, or to get you further once you're in.

On-Ramp

If you're new to CrossFit, you start here — one-on-one, not in a group class. Three sessions covering the fundamental movements, how we scale, the vocabulary, and what intensity should feel like.

Group Class

Coach-led, every session scaled three ways. This is where the work happens and where the community lives. Two membership options — Unlimited, or a 12-session plan if you train a set number of days a week. Ask a coach which one fits how you actually train.

The Lifestyle Reset — 12 weeks

What we recommend to most people who walk in wanting a real change rather than a gym membership. Twelve weeks, built around one-on-one attention:

- 3 on-ramp sessions in week one, then 9 more private sessions across the remaining weeks — 12 total, roughly one a week
- Unlimited group classes throughout
- 4 InBody scans, one every four weeks, so progress is measured and not guessed at
- Nutrition consultation plus ongoing coaching and accountability through our tracking app

Development Time

Included with Unlimited. Extra floor time for your own strength and skills, worked around whatever class is in session. Not open gym.

Nutrition Coaching

Habit tracking with regular dialogue with a coach. Training is one hour. Nutrition is the other twenty-three, and it decides most outcomes.

Personal Training

One-on-one sessions for a specific goal, a specific lift, or a return from injury. On its own or alongside group class.

InBody Scan

Your first one is free, and a coach walks you through the results — your water, lean mass and body fat, and why lean mass drives your metabolism. After that, $35 — open to anyone.

Your kid trains while you train.

Most gyms run kids classes after school as a separate program. We don't, and the reason is the most deliberate design decision in this building.

Kids and Teens classes run at the same hours as adult classes. When you're training on one side of the floor, your kid is training on the other. You arrive together, you work at the same time, you leave together.

And we run them year-round — same calendar as the adults, not on a sports season.

Why it's built this way

Kids install their defaults from their families, not from their coaches. A kid whose fitness is tied to football season stops training when the season ends — the training belonged to the team, the coach, and a schedule someone else set. Most of those kids never come back to it as adults. They peaked at seventeen.

A kid who trains while mom and dad train associates fitness with the family, not the season. When school sports end, nothing changes here. That's the version that holds.

Let athletics shape ability. Let the lifestyle shape the body and the long-term default. Those are two different jobs, and this gym is built to do the second one.

The kids who stay through their teens — and who come back as adults — are almost always the kids whose parents were in the room. That's not a coincidence. It's the mechanism.

House rules.

Short list. All of it is about safety, respect for the space, and not making the next class worse.

Class has priority — 100%

A class in session gets first claim on all floor space, all equipment, and the coach's attention. Development Time works around the class, never the other way around.

Wait for the coach's call

On "for time" workouts people finish at different times. Nobody breaks down equipment until everyone is done and the coach tells the class to put it away. Then bars stripped, plates racked by size, everything else home.

Clean up blood immediately

Blood on a bar, a box, or the floor gets cleaned before you move on — that one is not negotiable. Sweat and chalk, wipe down as a courtesy to whoever is on it next.

Chalk stays in the bucket

Use it over the bucket, not over the floor. Small thing, big difference on a rubber floor.

What you may never drop

Never drop an empty barbell, kettlebell, or dumbbell, or a bar loaded only with 10-pound plates. Change plates — the small rubber-coated metal ones — are never dropped, and belong on a bar only alongside a larger-diameter rubber plate. If a weight is too heavy to set down under control, it is too heavy today.

Scale it and log it

Every score gets logged — RX, intermediate, or beginner, no shame in any of them. Untracked training is a guess.

Kids stay on the brown floor

Children stay on the designated brown wooden floors, never on the black rubber. The only exception is a family-friendly session. We are not childcare — parents are responsible for their kids at all times.

Tell your coach about injuries

Before class, not after the workout. Old surgeries, bad shoulders, pregnancy, a rough night of sleep — all of it changes what we program for you that day.

Stay for the cool-down

Recovery is programmed, not optional — and it's when you'll hear announcements and tomorrow's preview. Leaving early means missing both.

Cheer for the last person

Non-negotiable. That person is working harder than anyone still standing.

Set yourself up.

Do these four things in your first week. It takes about ten minutes total.

1

Download the member app and book your classes

Reservations, your workout history, and your logged scores all live here. Book at least your first week of classes now — deciding in the morning is how the 5AM stops happening.

2

Open the Social tab in the app — and turn notifications on

This is where everything lives: gym announcements, events, member shoutouts, and the day-to-day community conversation. It's all in the app, so check the Social tab like you'd check a feed.

3

Follow @crossfitotl on Instagram

Events, workouts, PRs, and member milestones — including yours. It is the fastest way to see what is happening at the gym beyond your own hour.

4

Get your free baseline InBody scan

Every new member gets one free, and a coach sits down and walks you through it — your water, lean mass and body fat, where your numbers sit, and why lean mass is what drives your metabolism. If you didn't get yours at your consultation, just ask. Do it in your first week, before anything changes.

Fuel, gear, and everything else.

What we keep on the shelf, who we trust when your body needs more than training, and how to handle the administrative stuff without guessing.

Fuel & supplements

Up front we stock Thorne supplements, protein, collagen, creatine, LMNT, and Proletas protein ice cream bars. Beyond what's on the shelf, you have access to our full Thorne online dispensary at thorne.com/u/Crossfitotl.

Gear & apparel

Our own CrossFit OTL merch is at crossfit-otl.printify.me, and we partner with apparel and CrossFit gear providers for shoes, grips, belts, and the rest. Ask a coach what's worth buying before you buy it — some of it you don't need yet.

Bring a Friend days

We run them, and we mean it — tell people what changed for you and bring them in. Have your guest sign the waiver before class so they walk straight onto the floor instead of filling out forms.

Pause or cancel

Traveling, injured, or need to step away? The pause and cancellation forms are on crossfit-otl.com. Use them — don't just stop showing up.

Recovery & care partners

We sponsor and partner with local providers in physical therapy, chiropractic care, and recovery services. If something hurts — or you want to get ahead of it before it does — ask any coach or staff member for a referral. We will point you to people we actually trust, not a search result.

In an emergency.

We've had a member go down on this floor with a heart attack. The people around him did the right things — but nobody could tell the 911 dispatcher where they were. Read this page once, today, so that never happens again.

1

Our address — say it to the dispatcher

9155 Blvd 26, Suite 270
North Richland Hills, TX 76180

It is posted inside the front door, and at eye level on the back door — the back one matters on running days and any time class is working outside. Look at both this week so you know exactly where they are. A dispatcher cannot send anyone until they have an address; that is the single thing that costs the most time.

2

The AED is by the water fountains

Mounted on the wall, right by the fountains. Walk over and look at it today so you're not hunting for it under pressure. It talks you through every step out loud once it's open — you do not need training to use it, and using it early is what saves people.

For everything smaller — a torn hand, a scrape, a bad shin — ask your coach for the first aid kit. Don't dig for it and don't tough it out; just ask.

3

If someone goes down

Don't freeze and don't crowd. Three jobs, assigned out loud:

- Someone calls 911 and gives the address above.
- Someone gets the AED from the water fountains and brings it over.
- Someone goes outside to flag the ambulance and walk them in.

Your coach runs the scene. If you're not doing one of those three jobs, clear the space and keep the floor open.

Point out the AED and the door address to the next new person who walks in.
That's how this actually gets known — member to member, not from a packet.

CROSSFIT OTL

What's on the line?

EVERYTHING.

NOW SHOW UP.

Nothing in this packet matters as much as the next sixty days of attendance. Pick your class times, put them on the calendar, and come even on the days you don't feel like it — especially on those days. That's the whole method.
